

Susanne's letter

Dear Miss Brown,

I have been very worried about something and am not sure whether to write this letter, but I was awake all night thinking about it so I have decided to write to you.

It's about people's dinner money that's been going missing. You know Christine in our class? Well, some of us kept seeing she had some money and last week I asked her where she got it. She did not know I had seen her going through people's bags in the classroom. At first she said her mum gave it to her, but then she told me when people leave their bags or blazers she goes through them. I said that's stealing and she said it isn't really because her mum's poor and she needs some treatment on her back and the waiting list's too long and she's trying to save up enough to go private.

She was crying about it and said if you tell anyone I'll never speak to you again, but I just have to tell someone so I thought it had better be you because I don't know what to do.

From Susanne
